

A true FLIGHT ATTENDANT STORY:

This happened en-route on a Boeing 757.

The Flight Attendant who worked the First Class portion of the aircraft also looked after the Cockpit crew. The 4th flight attendant worked the aft Galley.

The simple press of a button on their com panel and the flight crew (Capt. & F/O) can hear everything that is said over the intercom.

First Class FA was in the cockpit checking on the flight crew's needs; coffee, soda or a bottle of water or anything?

1st FA: "You guy's need anything?"

Capt: "You have any meals left over? I'm starving."

1st FA: "No first class meals I'll check in the back and let you know. How about you?" she ask the First Officer. (F/O)

F/O:: Maybe some coffee?

1st FA: "Okay, I'll be right back."

She went to the back and picked up the intercom, at the same time the Capt said to the F/O, "Listen on the intercom they are going to be talking about us in a second." The F/O pushed the intercom button on his com panel and started listening.

1st FA: Buzzed the aft Galley.

4th FA: "Hello, what's up?"

1st FA: "You guys have any extra meals back there?"

4th FA: "Who wants to know?"

1st FA: "The Capt., he said he is starving."

4th FA: "I have extra meals but not any for the Capt."

1st FA: "Why not for the Capt?"

4th FA: "Because he is a FLAMING JERK"

1st FA: I didn't think you had ever flown with this Capt. How do you know he is a FLAMING JERK?"

4th FA: "The F/O told me so."
